Case № CV 14-01290-ODW (AJWx)

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT
SAMUEL BRASLAU'S MOTION TO STAY THE CASE [59]

19 I. INTRODUCTION

20 Plaintiff Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") filed the present civil 21 case against Defendants Samuel Braslau, Rand Chortkoff, and Stuart Rawitt in 22 parallel with a criminal case brought against the same Defendants by the Department 23 of Justice. The jury in the criminal case against Braslau returned a guilty verdict, 24 which Braslau is currently appealing. After Braslau's criminal conviction, the SEC 25 filed a Motion for Summary Judgment in the present civil case based on collateral 26 estoppel. (ECF No. 48) In response, Braslau requested that the Court stay the civil 27 case entirely until his criminal appeal resolves. (ECF No. 59.) The Court construes 28

1 Braslau's request as a Motion to Stay the Case and DENIES the Motion for the 2 reasons discussed below. (Id.)<sup>1</sup>

3 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

4 This case arises from an investment scheme based around a movie called, 5 ironically enough, The Smuggler. (Mot. for Summary Judgment ["MSJ"] 1.) The 6 SEC alleges that Braslau, an attorney, raised over $1.8 million from more than sixty 7 investors through the fraudulent sale of securities in two companies he controlled—8 Mutual Entertainment, LLC and Film Shoot, LLC. (Compl. ¶¶ 4–5.) Co-defendants 9 Rand Chortkoff and Stuart Rawitt recruited investors through a boiler room call 10 center, promising high returns on passive investments in The Smuggler. (MSJ 1–2.)
11 Braslau drafted the documents used in these solicitations, which included statements 12 that he allegedly knew were false. (Id. 2.) For example, Braslau knew that the 13 amounts paid to sales agents exceeded the amounts represented to investors in the 14 private placement memorandum that he drafted. (Id.)

15 On February 20, 2014, the SEC filed the present Complaint against Braslau, 16 Chortkoff, and Rawitt. (ECF No. 1.) In it, the SEC alleges that Braslau committed 17 fraud in the offer of sale of securities in violation of Section 17(a) of the Securities 18 Act, and fraud in connection with the purchase or sale of securities in violation of 19 Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 of the Securities Exchange Act. (Compl. ¶ 9.) The 20 SEC seeks a permanent injunction against any future violations of these rules and 21 statutes.<sup>2</sup> (Compl. 18–19.) On the same day the Complaint was filed, a criminal 22 indictment charging Braslau with federal wire fraud, mail fraud, and violation of false 23 statement statutes was unsealed. (MSJ 3; see also United States v. Braslau, CR. No.
24 14-00044-RGK-1 (C.D. Cal.)) The facts underlying the indictment are almost 25

26 <sup>1</sup> After carefully considered the papers filed in support of and in opposition to the Motion, the Court 27 deems the matter appropriate for decision without oral argument. Fed. R. Civ. P. 78; L.R. 7-15.

28 <sup>2</sup> Although the SEC initial sought civil penalties and disgorgement of all ill-gotten gains from Braslau, it has since dismissed those forms of relief because Braslau is serving an eighty-seven month prison sentence and was ordered to pay $1,618,697 in restitution. (MSJ 1.)

1 identical to those underlying the present civil claim. (MSJ 3–4.) On May 20, 2014, 2 the Court stayed the civil case pending completion of the criminal proceedings against 3 Braslau. (ECF No. 14.) On November 14, 2014, a jury convicted Braslau of eleven 4 counts of mail fraud, five counts of wire fraud, and one count of making a false 5 statement. (CR ECF No. 123.) Braslau filed a Notice of Appeal on May 7, 2015.
 6 (Id., ECF No. 175.)

7 On August 10, 2015, this Court received notice of the jury verdict in Braslau’s 8 criminal case. (ECF No. 44.) On August 27, 2015, the SEC filed a Motion for 9 Summary Judgment as to all claims against Braslau. (ECF No. 48.) Braslau, by then 10 incarcerated at the United States Penitentiary, Lompoc, did not oppose the motion.
 11 On November 3, 2015, the Court issued an Order to Show Cause as to why it should 12 not grant the SEC’s motion for summary judgment in full. (ECF No. 54.) The SEC 13 filed proof of service, showing that it delivered the Order to Show Cause to Braslau in 14 prison. (ECF No. 55.) On November 18, 2015, Braslau timely responded to the 15 Court’s order, stating that he did not receive a copy of the Motion for Summary 16 Judgment and further requesting a stay on the Motion until the completion of his 17 appeal. (ECF No. 59.) In this reply, Braslau used a different address than the one 18 used by the SEC to serve the Motion for Summary Judgment. (See Mot. Not. of 19 Service.) The SEC immediately filed a reply, opposing the request for a stay, and 20 reiterating its position that it properly served the Motion for Summary Judgment on 21 Braslau. (ECF No. 60.) However, in an abundance of caution, the SEC again served 22 the Motion for Summary Judgment on Braslau using the new address. (ECF No. 60 at 23 2.)

24 III. LEGAL STANDARD

25 While a district court may stay civil proceedings pending completion of a 26 parallel criminal case, it is not required to do so by the Constitution. Fed. Sav. & 27 Loan Ins. Corp. v. Molinaro, 889 F.2d 899, 902 (9th Cir. 1989). While a stay is an 28 extraordinary remedy, a court may decide to do so in its discretion when the interests

1 of justice require it. Id. at 899. In deciding whether to issue a stay, the court should 2 consider six factors: (1) the extent to which a defendant's Fifth Amendment rights are 3 implicated; (2) the plaintiff's interest in proceeding expeditiously with the litigation 4 and whether a delay causes any potential prejudice to the plaintiff; (3) whether the 5 proceedings impose any burden on the defendant; (4) judicial efficiency; (5) nonparty 6 interests; and (6) the public's interest in the pending civil and criminal litigation. Id.
 7 at 902–03.

8 IV. DISCUSSION

9 Braslau contends that the Court should stay the civil proceedings against him 10 until his criminal appeal is completed. (Mot. at 1–2.) Specifically, he argues that any 11 response to the SEC's Motion for Summary Judgment would violate his Fifth 12 Amendment right against self-incrimination, as any statement he makes could be used 13 against him in the criminal appeal or during a new trial. (Id. at 2.)

14 A. Implication of Fifth Amendment Rights

15 When deciding whether to grant a stay of civil proceedings, the Court first 16 considers the extent to which the defendant's Fifth Amendment rights are implicated.
 17 See Keating v. Office of Thrift Supervision, 45 F.3d 322, 324 (9th Cir. 1995).
 18 Braslau's arguments in support of the requested stay strongly emphasize this factor.

19 “A defendant has no absolute right not to be forced to choose between testifying 20 in a civil matter and asserting his Fifth Amendment privilege.” Keating, 45 F.3d at 21 326. While a defendant's Fifth Amendment right is an important consideration, “it is 22 only one consideration to be weighed against others.” Id. However, courts do 23 recognize that the Fifth Amendment factor weighs heavily when a party under 24 indictment for a serious offense is required to simultaneously defend a civil action 25 involving the same matter. Id.

26 Braslau's privilege against self-incrimination does not necessarily mandate a 27 halt in the civil proceedings. Where the trial in the parallel criminal proceeding has 28 concluded, and a conviction is challenged on appeal, courts are generally more

1 reluctant to stay parallel civil proceedings. See Milton Pollack, Parallel Civil and 2 Criminal Proceedings, 129 F.R.D. 201, 204 (1989) (“[T]he appeal process is an 3 uncertain, potentially long-ranging, process. Only unusual circumstances would 4 justify an order staying a post-conviction civil proceeding.”); see also Gen. Dynamics 5 Corp. v. Selb Mfg. Co., 481 F.2d 1204, 1215 (8th Cir. 1973) (upholding the denial of 6 an indefinite stay of civil proceedings sought after conviction but during appeal); Doe 7 v. City of San Diego, No. 12-CV-689-MMA-DHB, 2012 WL 6115663, at *2 (S.D.
 8 Cal. Dec. 10, 2012)(denying an indefinite stay of civil proceedings sought during a 9 criminal appeal because the defendant failed to establish the necessity of the stay).

10 Here, there is no question that Braslau’s Fifth Amendment rights are implicated 11 by allowing this case to proceed while his criminal conviction is being appealed, as 12 both cases involve almost identical facts. The Motion, though, turns upon the extent 13 to which his Fifth Amendment rights are implicated. Keating, 45 F.3d at 324.
 14 Braslau is appealing his conviction, and therefore it is possible that statements he 15 makes in the course of the civil proceeding could be used against him in a possible
 16 retrial of the criminal case. (See ECF No. 48.) However, the possibility of a retrial 17 appears remote. The Court presiding over Braslau’s criminal trial noted that his 18 appeal does not raise any “substantial question of law or fact likely to result in 19 reversal [or] an order for a new trial.” (CR ECF No. 198.)

20 Additionally, there are remedies short of an indefinite stay that could serve to 21 protect Braslau even if he is retried. See O. Thronas, Inc. v. Blake, 2010 WL 931924, 22 at *3 (D. Hawai’i Mar.10, 2010)(stay unnecessary, as defendants’ fifth amendment 23 rights could be protected through less drastic means such as asserting the privilege on 24 a question by question basis and implementing protective orders). Braslau has already 25 testified during his criminal trial, and likely addressed many of the issues that he will 26 be dealing with in the civil case. He can therefore protect his Fifth Amendment rights 27 through other, less drastic measures, like those discussed in O. Thronas. See Doe,

1 2012 WL 6115663, at *2. The Court therefore finds that this factor does not weigh 2 heavily in favor of granting the requested stay.

3 B. Prejudice to the SEC

4 The Court next considers whether a stay might result in any prejudice to the 5 plaintiff. See Keating, 45 F.3d at 325. Braslau contends that this factor weighs in his 6 favor because all of the SEC's rights "would be reserved and held in abeyance until 7 the conclusion" of the criminal appeal. (Mot. at 2.) The SEC failed to address this 8 factor in its response.

9 The events underlying this case began in April 2011 and continued through 10 August 2013. (See ECF No. 48-1 at 1.) The SEC filed its Complaint on February 20, 11 2014, and the case was stayed until the conclusion of Braslau's criminal trial. (ECF 12 No. 14.) On November 14, 2014, the jury reached a verdict, and on May 07, 2015, 13 Braslau filed a Notice of Appeal. (CR ECF Nos. 123, 175.)

14 The Court recognizes that as the agency responsible for enforcement of the 15 securities laws, the SEC must be able to respond quickly to securities violations and 16 seek prompt judicial redress. See S.E.C. v. Loomis, No. 2:10-CV-00458-KJM-KJN, 17 2013 WL 4543939, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 27, 2013). The Court also recognizes that a 18 stay would increase the odds that key witnesses may become unavailable, that their 19 memories will fade, and that documents in their possession may be lost. Braslau 20 requests that the Court stay the case until the completion of his appeals process.
21 Given the lengthy appeals process, the stay already previously ordered in the civil 22 action, and the amount of time that has passed since the events at issue took place, the 23 Court finds that the SEC will suffer prejudice if the stay is extended until the 24 resolution of the appeal. See S.E.C. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 628 F.2d 1368, 1374
25 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (noting that the SEC has a strong interest in proceeding expeditiously 26 with litigation). Accordingly, this factor weighs in favor of denying a stay.

1 C. Burden on Braslau

2 The next factor considered is the burden that any aspect of the civil proceedings 3 might impose on the defendant. See Keating, 45 F.3d at 325. Braslau argues that he 4 would be greatly burdened if the present case proceeds because he intends to assert his 5 Fifth Amendment privilege, and therefore will not be able to present any viable
6 defense. (Mot. at 2.)

7 As discussed above, Braslau has no constitutional right to a stay of this civil 8 proceeding pending completion of his criminal appeal. See Keating, 45 F.3d at 326.
9 Furthermore, Braslau may assert his Fifth Amendment privilege on an issue-by-issue 10 basis throughout the proceedings, giving him the opportunity to defend himself even 11 while asserting the privilege. Lastly, as noted above, the Court presiding over 12 Braslau's criminal trial noted that his appeal does not raise any "substantial question 13 of law or fact likely to result in reversal [or] an order for a new trial." (CR ECF No.
14 198.) Therefore, though Braslau may be slightly prejudiced by not granting a stay, the 15 degree of prejudice is not great enough to outweigh the other factors.

16 D. Judicial Efficiency

17 This factor usually weighs against granting a stay because "the court has an 18 interest in clearing its docket." Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903. Here, Braslau requests an 19 indefinite stay to this civil case, which will directly and negatively impact the Court's 20 interest in efficiently managing its docket. Accordingly, this factor weighs against 21 granting a stay.

22 E. Nonparty Interests

23 Courts next consider whether the interests of nonparties will be impacted by the 24 issuance of the stay. See Keating, 45 F.3d at 325. Neither Braslau nor the SEC have 25 argued that any nonparties would be implicated by the issuance of a stay in the present 26 case. This factor therefore does not weigh in either party's favor.

1   F.     Public Interest

2           The final factor to be considered is the public’s interest in the pending criminal 3 and civil litigation. See Keating, 45 F.3d at 325. Braslau argues that granting a stay 4 furthers the public interest by “assuring all citizens and all defendants [that] their legal 5 rights will not be terminated and curtailed by any zealous and hurried” government 6 investigation. Although the public certainly has an interest in fair proceedings, 7 granting a stay to this case will not impugn that interest. See City of San Diego, 2012 8 WL 6115663, at *5. This factor therefore does not weigh in favor of either granting or 9 denying a stay.

10          After analyzing the six factors laid out by the Ninth Circuit, the Court 11 determines that Braslau has failed to establish the necessity of staying the present 12 case. Braslau’s Fifth Amendment rights are not sufficiently implicated to warrant a 13 lengthy stay, and the Court has determined that such a stay would prejudice the SEC 14 and harm the Court’s attempt to manage its docket efficiently.

15                           V.     CONCLUSION

16          For the reasons discussed above, the Court concludes that a stay is neither 17 necessary nor appropriate. Accordingly, the Court DENIES Braslau’s Motion to Stay 18 the present case. (ECF No. 59.)

19           ///

20           ///

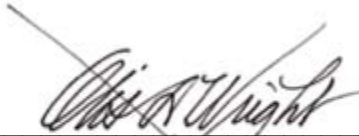

21           ///

1 In recognition of Braslau's assertion that he did not receive the SEC's Motion 2 for Summary Judgment, the Court extends the deadline for filing an opposition to 3 January 7, 2015. The SEC must then file any reply papers by January 14, 2016.
4 According to the SEC, it again served the Motion for Summary Judgment on Braslau, 5 using the address indicated in Braslau's Motion to Stay. The Court orders the SEC to 6 promptly serve this Order on Braslau at 3705 West Farm Road, Lompoc, CA 93436.
